What has been going on Lately? [1]

Read time: 2 minutes
The website has been quiet for a while. The reason is that a number of things have been happening.

The drought has not been because of a lack on inspiration: indeed, I have more topics in my backlog than ever before. One factor is that I was on holiday for bit and then got trapped by the bluesy madness when I returned. Another thing is that I have decided to redo this website: new look, new focus and a new name. It has not been long since the previous update in looks and name (at least in the URL), but I want to do a better job of it this time and therefore hope that the new incarnation will last a good long while. This process is likely to take a number of months, so expect some fanfare when the new website launches!

However the biggest reason for the delay is the next article which I have been putting off writing. It is a personal one, relating to a ministry in which I have been involved for about two years. The latest developments have been emotional and complicated, and I wanted to share it, but at the same time I avoided doing so. Today, however, there have been new developments and I feel encouraged now to write about it. Due to the complicated nature of the situation, I shall be breaking the story up into smaller parts and hope to publish them in quick succession. The first article will be following shortly.

Grace and peace.
